When travelling to an English speaking country, it is sometimes hard to express yourself. Whether it's asking for the bathroom or just trying to make a simple conversation with someone, a lot of times you just wish you had a little bit more English knowledge to understand and say what you want. If you are planning on traveling abroad or will be going on a homestay, this course is for you. You will learn what you need to survive on your overseas trip and how to express your wants and desires.

Students in Japan benefit from a compulsory education that is relatively equal for all. It is a luxury that few around the world can enjoy. One has to wonder, though: if everyone your age has the same education, what will set you apart? What will give you the edge when you apply to university? How will you stand out among your peers when you interview for jobs? The answer here at Jissen lies within the Global Perspectives after school program. Through fostering volunteerism, participating in Model United Nations, and not only finding solutions to problems surrounding the Sustainable Development Goals but also acting on those solutions, Global Perspectives will develop:

- Soft Skills:
 - Research
 - Communication
 - Courage to assert oneself while meeting new people
 - Public Speaking
 - Debate
 - Critical Thinking and Problem Solving
 - Creativity
 - Leadership
- College Application Materials
 - MUN and SDGs look great on college applications.
 - Good colleges and universities look for, among many things, the soft skills described above.
- Experience
 - Potential Domestic and International Travel
 - Seeing what the best and brightest students are like around the world
- Networking Potential

Above all, the teachers of Global Perspectives and Jissen in general want to help you achieve your best, but you have to take the first step.
